

Dr. James Chitwood is an Army Infantry veteran and a former university and college president, professor, and administrator. After a difficult childhood, James dedicated himself to making a positive impact on the world, leading to a successful career in post-secondary education. James was called to write an organizational performance book, Leadership is Not Enough, where he expected to spend the rest of his career consulting organizations. God called him to dig deeper and give back in a more profound way, leading James to become the Market President for C-Suite for Christ Chicago. His talks on organizational performance and faith at work are powerful reminders of the power of people to drive organizational results.

